Great Topics, Useless Textbook By Trevor Anderson The words that come to mind when I think of this book are (sadly) "useless", "biased", "illogical", and "un-proofread". This book, as many of the other reviews have stated, is paradoxically opinionated. It tries to teach the concept of an open mind to art, and being what it labels an "infinite being", while blatant hypocrisy stains its pages otherwise. Also, no mention of anything but European art is mentioned. I am sad to see such a terrible book be required for a course that should use open-sourced information. Professors: please don't waste your time or students' money with this book. You will find more reliable information on Wikipedia and from high school humanities books. If you're a student, don't waste your money. Unless there are specific reading quizzes or something, you probably won't benefit from this book. Most humanities courses are full very open-ended questions that generally only require your opinion. If you absolutely need it, just rent it. Never going to be worth the money. 4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. I'm supposed to be learning what?By AmyBI wish I could give this book no stars. So poorly written and very clearly biased. Why any instructor would use this as a textbook is beyond me. I can't wait until this semester is over. Worst textbook I've ever been subjected to.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy AppThanks!

The Art of Being Human, Eighth Edition,introduces students to the ways in which the humanities can broaden their perspectives, enhance their ability to think critically, and enrich their lives. Ideal for the one-semester humanities course, this well-respected book has been lauded for its scope, accessibility, and writing style. Featuring a unique topical organization, Part I examines ways of responding to the humanities, their mythic origins, and important struggles in the arts. Part II explores the individual genres of literature, art, music, theater, song and dance, and cinema. Part III looks at provocative themes in the humanities: religion, morality, happiness, love, life and death, and freedom.
